A colorectal cancer survivor completes Medical PG at Apollo Hospitals

Dr Venkatesh Munikrishnan, Consultant Colorectal & Robotic Surgeon, the Apollo Institute of Colorectal Surgery, Chennai said, "She was diagnosed with very low rectal cancer in 2017 when she was 24 years of age, just as she was about to join her medical post-graduation. It was a shock to her as she expected that even with treatment her medical dreams would come to an abrupt halt. This is because conventional surgery for colorectal cancer leaves patients with a colostomy. It was then that she approached us with the hope that we could offer her a solution that would let her continue her studies and live a normal life. And we did not let her down."
